BISCHOFF CONFESSES SLAYING CHILD

•CINCINNATI OFFICERS SAY SUSPECT ADMITS KILLING M'LEAN GIRL

Shoemaker and Owner of Tenement Building, Man Who Found Body of Six-Year-Old Child, Breaks Down Under Grilling of Officers; Claims Fit of Insanity Caused Act

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 11.—Charles Bischoff, 15. shoemaker and owner of a small tenement house here, confessed today he had killed six-year-old Marian McLean and hid her battered body in the basement of the tenement house, authorities announced.

* * *

The child's body was found shortly before Christmas day.

Bischoff's confession was obtained, according to Sheriff Asa Butterfield and County Prosecutor Hobert M. Gorman, after an intensive grilling since Saturday.

HAD BEEN HELD

Bischoff had been held since the day the tragedy was discovered when he rushed wild-eyed out of his home into the arms of firemen searching for the little girl and told of having found the child's body in the basement.

Bischoff committed the crime, he was quoted as saying, because "I gues it's my nautre—nature is a funny thing."

County Prosecutor Robert Gorman said Bischoff's case would be presented to the grand jury, probably tomorrow in an effort to obtain a first-degree murder indictment.

According to Sheriff Asa Butterfield, Bischoff had been suspected of the crime for several days. It was not until early this morning, however, he said, that Bischoff "broke" under the constant grilling and said, "Well, I'll tell you about it."

DISAPPEARED DEC. 17

The horrid crime from the time the little girl disappeared under mysterious circumstances from her home on December 17 until her battered body was discovered two weeks later in the basement of Bischoff's tenement house was unfolded detail by detail in the alleged confession, Butterfield said.

The purported confession was made in the presence of J. W. Briskill, assistant county prosecutor, William E Hopper. R. H. French and Dorothy Black

For 19 days Bischoff was held under the spotlight of investigation in connection with the brutal child murder. He had resisted all efforts to wring the story from him until authorities staged a spectacular scene that brought forth the reputed confession.

SCENE PLANNED

The scene was arranged by Captain Lynn Black, a deputy, who related the developments as follows:

Pretending to be a relative of the McLean family, Black dashed into the office of Sheriff Butterfield with a revolver with which he forced and locked two other deputies into a washroom.

Then, threateningly, Black approached Biscoff with the drawn weapon and took him to the basement garage of the courthouse where he accused him of the murder.

Bischoff was at first overcome. Black related, but later said:

"Well, I might have done it I don't remember."

Black then returned Bischoff to the Sheriff's office and fled waving his revolver.

The deputies "escaped" from the washroom shortly afterward and immediately faked a call to a police station to "get a man who

MARION MCLEAN

Expects 'Chair' For His Act

CINCINNATI, O., Jan 11 —"I expect to go to the electric chair for what I've done," Charles Bischoff, 45, shoemaker, declared today following his alleged confession to the brutal murder of six-year-old Marion McLean.

Expressing sorrow over the dead which he said he "didn't have any idea of committing," Bischoff admitted to authorities that he knew "what's going to happen to me"

Bischoff confessed to the crime after having been grilled for 19 days, authorities said.

GANDHI'S WIFE JAILED TODAY

British Continued Campaign To Halt Disobedience In India By Arrests.

BOMBAY, Jan. 11.—In probably the most sensational move the British government has made in its campaign to suppress nationalists, government police today arrested the wife of Mahatma Gandhi.

Seized at Bardoli along with other nationalist leaders, including other women The Mahatma's wife accepted the surprise arrest calmly.

The possibility that Mrs. Gandhi would be jailed was great, since it was unlikely she would apologize for her activities in the civil disobedience campaign, and the government has pursued a policy of sending to prison all who failed to do this.

Meanwhile Gandhi's followers continued their resistance to government ordinances throughout the country. The most serious outbreaks were reported from Karachi, where 30 were injured after police charged a public demonstration, and at Spinigar, were a mob of 10,000 stormed a jail and freed three prisoners of their ranks.

Capital Buzzes With Excitement as Opening of Struggle Nears

DEMOCRATS GATHER

Quieting of Davey Faction is Problem

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11— Ohio's capital buzzed with political excitement today, awaiting momentous events

Chance, this week, promised to bring all the state's leading Democrats and two of its formost Republicans to the city within a few hours of each other, possibly resulting in the opening of the 1932 gubernationrial fight.

While here to address the Ohio Fair Managers association Wednesday night, former Governor Myers Y. Cooper is expected to dispel the mystery about his plans for 1932 and say definitely whether he will try a comeback this year.

DINNER IS THURSDAY

At a rousing Democratic "victory dinner" scheduled for Thursday night, Governor George White, victor over Cooper in 1930, may announce his candidacy for a second term.

David S. Ingalls of Cleveland, assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics, and an avowed candidate for Republican nomination for governor, will be attracted to Columbus Wednesday by the same meeting which will bring Cooper here.

If Ingalls follows out the schedule previously outlined for him, sometime during his stay here he probably will make a definite statement about his plans.

The Democratic "victory dinner" will signalize the opening of a united attack on Ohio Republicans. Many celebrities will be present.

ALL INVITED

All Ohio's Democratic presidential possibilities have been invited, including White, former secretary of War Newton D. Baker, former governor James M. Cox and U. S. Senator Robert J. Bulkley.

Although a fight threatens between Martin L. Davey of Kent, leader of the Baker-for-president movement, and the "harmony faction" that is trying to pledge the Ohio presidential delegation to White, efforts will be made to quiet the Davey group here Thursday in the interests of the party's unity.

Chances for fights of other types will be plentiful, however, in various meetings of district leaders to be held here Thursday.

GUTHERY IS CENTER

One possible Democratic wrangle that looms this week concerns Director of Agriculture L. S. Guthery, whose resignation was virtually asked recently in a resolution sent to the governor by the Ohio Fair Managers association.

During the fair managers meeting, investigation is to be conducted into the origin of the resolution, as several members are reported to have declared that the resignation of Guthery was not requested in the resolution that they authorized, and that the association only voted to ask for the reinstatement of Mrs. Helen Sloan Maher, secretary of the state board of agriculture whom Guthery had discharged.

A meeting of the Ohio board of agriculture also is to be held this week when Guthery's various troubles, including the discharge and reinstatement of State Fair Manager Charles M. Beer may be given an airing.

Thriving Town of Over 4,000 Souls Has Sprung Up on Site of Gigantic Boulder Dam Project in Nevada. Boasts 228 School Children—and a School.

Panoramic View of Boulder City, Nevada.

Where less than a year ago in the Nevada desert there existed only a few shacks with a total population of about a dozen men, there is now the thriving community of Boulder City, with a personnel of over 4,000 persons. The mushroom city is a result of the gigantic Boulder Dam project that will harness the mighty Colorado River and provide electric power as well as irrigating lands that now are desert wilderness, making them fertile and an addition to the nation's larder. The new city is built on the rim of the Black Canyon, 1,600 feet above the roaring Colorado River on Government owned land. Unlike the boom towns of oil and gold rush days, Boulder City is extremely law-abiding. It has to be, for the terms on which the Government leases the land to tenants provide for a termination of tenancy should they deviate from the straight and narrow path. The new city also has its school to provide for the 228 children of its inhabitants. Photos above are some scenes in the city. Top shows a group of the workers waiting for the dinner gong. Center photo is the modern railroad station, where new citizens are arriving daily. Lower is a general view of the city, showing the orderly layout of streets at left.

WOULD CUT FARM PRODUCTION COST

Low cost production rather than quantity production can do much to put agriculture on a more stable and prosperous basis, says D R Dodd, extension specialist in soils and crops at the Ohio State University.

One factor that costs nothing and usually figures very largely in low cost production, he points out, is farm manure. Crop yields of 50 bushels of corn, 25 bushels of wheat, and 2 tons of hay per acre, obtained from a rotation of corn, wheat, and hay, if fed on the farm or used as bedding, will produce sufficient manure if saved to make an 8-ton application each year on one-third of the crop land.

Some long time Ohio experiments show such manure to have a production value of 25 bushels of corn, 10 bushels of wheat, and 1300 pounds of hay for each 8-ton application. It is very common experience to find that only one-half of the manure produced is available at the time it is to be applied to the land. Unnecessary manure losses ranging from a few tons to 50 or 100 tons per farm are to be found in every section.

Figured in terms of crops this means from 25 to 300 extra bushels of corn, from 10 to 125 bushels of wheat, and from 1300 pounds to 8 tons extra hay from the same acres without additional cash outlay. The practice of supplementing manure with superphosphate rather than applying the superphosphate alone on additional acres has like possibilities.

When used in this manner, 320 pounds of 16 per cent superphosphate has produced on the average over a period of over 30 years, 10 bushels of corn, 6 bushels of wheat and 800 pounds of hay. If corn and wheat be figured at 25 cents per bushel and hay at $5 per ton, the increased crop yields are sufficient to pay for the superphosphate and leave 100 per cent gain on the investment.

HASWELL FURNACE CAN'T BE BEAT

With changing weather conditions prevailing most of the time, it is well to be on the safe side and be prepared to meet the cold weather which is undoubtedly on the way and probably just around the corner.

How will your homes be heated this winter? This is the question of any number of house residents. Probably the best solution to this question is the installation of a "Haswell Three Pipe Radiator Furnace." The furnace can be installed by skilled mechanics at reasonable prices.

Mr. Haswell will be glad to answer any inquiries you wish to make.

Tanks for gasoline and gas engines can be furnished at Haswell's cheaper than you can buy them from the engine manufacer.

LOCAL FIRM HOME OF CRYSTAL MIST

The company is owned by home people and deserves the patronage of Pickaway-co residents who own or operate motor vehicles.

Pay a visit to one of the Circleville Oil stations and one try will convience you that this gasoline can't be excelled for performance and endurance.

COWS AND SWINE IN LIMELIGHT, FEB. 1-5
Profitable livestock production will hold the attention of some 3,000 Ohio farmers on Feb. 1-5, when they attend the twentieth annual Farmers' Week at the college of agriculture, Ohio State University, Columbus, says an announcement released by the office of agricultural extension at the state university.
Girding themselves to resist further inroads on their income during the present depression, visitors at the farm classic will discuss proposed solutions for the serious problems now confronting Ohio agriculture.
Dairy topics will be in the limelight when visitors confer on such topics as how to select better bulls, feeds for winter and spring, the dairy outlook for 1932, why it pays to produce good milk, ways of improving the dairy herd for profit, the profitable marketing of dairy products, factors affecting the dairy marketing situation, getting the most from dairy feeds, and how to obtain proven bulls.
Swine raisers attending Farmers' Week will have an opportunity to discuss such important subjects as a policy for the control of swine diseases in Ohio, current problems in swine production, and recent swine investigations at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. Of particular interest to sheepmen are the talks on the flock records at the state university, and how to improve sheep production practices through the study of farm account records.
Beef cattle, and horses also will be discussed in detail by nationally known authorities in those fields.

WINNING STREAK OF GIRLS' TEAM IS SHATTERED SATURDAY

Groveport Team Victor, 42 To 33

Led by Capt. Bernice Heskett star on last year's local school team who accounted for 22 points, Groveport high school girls handed Coach Rains' girls basketball team its first defeat in over 20 games Saturday evening in a game played on the Groveport floor. The score was 42-33. The local girls had not been beaten since 1930 when Lancaster girls defeated them by a one-point score, they were avenged in a return game here.

Failure of the Red and Black girls to employ a tight defensive the first half accounted for the loss of the game.

Working the ball fast and always placing it in the hands of the right person who either happened to be a Miss Heskett or Miss Sachs, the latter unguardable for several reasons, Miss Heckman's Groveport girls had piled up a 21-9 lead on Miss Rains' at the end of the first quarter.

The teams played three division floor during the first half, and the Red and Black, unaccustomed to such a system, became somewhat confused and its offensive was far from standard.

Jean Fitzpatrick and Ellen Bennett, Circleville's forwards were guarded more closely than ever before and as a result were held down to the few nine points in the first period.

Miss Rains' team outscored Groveport by a goal during the second quarter. The score at the end of this period was 29-19. For some reason or other, Groveport managed to keep ahead of Circleville, by ten points at all times. This was only broken in one instance, toward the end of the last quarter when the Red and Black had rolled its score to 33 points, its limit for the game, and Groveport had but a six point lead. Two minutes were left to play and it was thought Circleville might tie the score, but Miss Heskett again broke loose and accounted for two buckets raising the score to 42 at the end of the game.

Miss Fitzpatrick was high for the Red and Black hitting the hoop safely eight times and completing seven charity tosses. Miss Bennett with six points and Jane Hitler with six markers accounted for the rest of the score.

Bernice Heskett with 10 goals and two fouls, a total of 22, Miss Sachs with six goals and Miss Andrews with eight points accounted for the opponents' score.

The local score book was not available after the game so no box score can be given of the game.

SAYS MEN SING BETTER

IOWA CITY, Ia.,—Men are better singers than women, according to Dr. Harold Williams of the psychology department of the University of Iowa. Williams announced that he found by the use of the tonoscope, an instrument for measuring tonal accuracy, that women are inclined to sharp their notes without observing the difference, whereas men give an accurate reproduction of the tones. The professor used 14 men and 33 women in the experiment.

MEASURES NOISE UNIT

PARIS—A standard for the measurement of noise has just been discovered by Mr. C. Cellerier, principal of the experimental laboratory of the Conservatorie des Arts et Metiers. Up to now, it has been impossible to say at just what point a noise became a system of measuring the noise. This device establishes the unit of noise and measures the intensity of any given sound. The unit is called a "decibell."

Grid Laurels for Trojans

A season of Trojan football glory was climaxed when two coveted awards were made to the University of Southern California at a special assembly in Bovard Auditorium, Los Angeles. The Knute Rockne Cup, signifying the gridiron championship of the nation, was presented to the student body by Professor Frank G. Dickinson, whose system of rating determines the winner of the cup. The Los Angeles University Club plaque was awarded to Gus Shaver, as the most valuable player. GRIDIRON ACES MEET ON MAT

Savoldi and Kruskamp Tangle In Two-Hour Limit Match In Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11.—"Jumping Joe" Savoldi, the man who has had about as much success in the wrestling game as he enjoyed while wearing the colors of Notre Dame's undefeated 1930 football eleven, was the chief source of comment on the part of Columbus sport fans today. Savoldi meets Harry Kruskamp, former backfield star at Ohio State, in a two-hour finish match here Wednesday night.

Their meeting, enlightened by the collegiate atmosphere, is of outstanding interest because "Jumping Joe" has trod the rosy path of victory ever since his early college days. He has confronted both good and bad from coast to coast but all have succumbed to his "bunting and flying tackle" tactics. Kruskamp, an exponent of similar tactics, is not so highly rated but nevertheless he is confident he can make Joe say "uncle" before the time limit.

Ray Richards, former all-American tackle at Nebraska, will add more collegiate color to the card in a finish match with Barna Ostopo, a prominent young Polish grappler. Ray Carpenter of Lancaster will display his wares with Mustapha Pasha, in a 30-minute setto. The opening event will see Jack McCoy of Nashville, Tenn., grappling with Leslie Grimes of Australia.

MANY GAMES ON OHIO SKED

Collegiate Basketball Teams Enter Strenuous Part of Season This Week.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11.—Collegiate dribblers donned their uniforms today for the most active week on the court that has been experienced since the season inauguration late last fall. The thick of the fight has arrived, 36 games being scheduled on the six-day program.

Fourteen battles will be run off in the Ohio conference; eight will pass in discard in the Buckeye Athletic association and three in the Northwest loop. Ohio State, Big Ten conference member, will play its only battle Saturday night against Iowa Hawkeyes at Iowa city.

Xavier college of Cincinnati is the only other team to leave Ohio's boundaries, playing Michigan State at East Lansing Friday night and the University of Detroit Saturday.

As the second week of Buckeye competition rolls around, Depauw and Wittenberg appear as outstanding championship contenders. With three consecutive triumphs and no setbacks the Hoosier cagers invade Buckeye territory for tilts with Cincinnati and Miami on Friday and Saturday nights.

Old-time friendliness will prevail as Wittenberg and Ohio Wesleyan resume activities after a year's lapse Saturday night at Delaware.

Mount Union's attempt to continue its victorious run when it meets Akron Friday night will probably be the hightlight of the Ohio loop.

BUCKEYES INVADE IOWA'S HOME FLOOR

Victorious in First Two Starts C. S. U. Has High Hopes; Games On Tonight.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan 11 — Off to a good start in its 17-game schedule, Ohio State's basketball squad journeys to Iowa City on Saturday to return Iowa's visit here of last Saturday. For the return battle, the Buckeyes probably will continue to use Robert Colburn, Dayton, and John Fugitt, Portsmouth, at forwards, Frederick Conrad, Wooster, at center, and Captain Joe Heffer, Youngstown, and Howard Mattison, Erie, Pa., as guards.

This week the Big Ten race will settle down for the long battle that will not end until March 7. Monday night was to see eight teams in action, Ohio State and Chicago being the only two idle squads. The games were: Northwestern at Iowa, Wisconsin at Purdue, Minnesota at Michigan and Illinois at Indiana.

On Saturday, besides the Ohio State-Iowa engagement Indina, Wisconsin and Michigan play at Minnesota, Chicago and Northwestern, respectively. With the second Iowa game the Buckeyes will have but two remaining January engagements, January 26 will see the Ohioans at Northwestern, while Michigan comes here January 28.

As in the past February will prove to be the most strenuous month, there being six Western Conference games and an intersectional battle with the Navy at Annapolis on the slate for the Ohioans.

Self Valuation

WITHOUT ostentation man should value himself more highly than is his wont. It is one of man's faults that he undervalues himself, lacks confidence in his ability and admits to himself that he "can't." It is possible to known thyself, and for man to achieve something worthwhile in this world he must believe in himself for his full worth.

"Swell-headedness" is applied to persons who affect qualities unpossessed. One can be self-confident without being complacent and presuming .Man may know himself without letting others know he knows himself, that in truth, is the secret of success among men.

The higher a man's valuation of himself, the more his compassion and charity for his fellowmen. There is no condescension in his manner because realizing a value in himself he unconsciously seeks out values in others.

One cannot expect the world to count him as of intrinsic worth if he himself does not recognize that worth. It becomes so much a part of our thought structure and our very personality that it plainly manifests itself in our words and acts. Unostentation self-confidence is natural expression of personal evalution. Vain boasting is a cloak to conceal natural weakness and failings. He who brags is painfully aware of his shortcomings: otherwise he would be conscious of nothing to boast about.

Self-confidence is the recognition of shortcomings overcome. Boasting is the recognition of shortcomings to overcome.

Confidence

SUCCESSFUL progress needs a destination that is worth while and worth seeking after. Confidence in such a goal is the mainspring of ambition, and without it work is barren and good intention is wasted. If zeal for a final goal be linked to some clear vision of it, our labors are full of hope and our progress keeps pace with our growth and strength.

The instinct of humanity has insisted through the ages that this life has for its end and purpose a fuller, richer and more truly human life of enternal and joyful service. Confidence in this destination has upborne men and women, and also whole peoples and races, through toil and anxiety that would otherwise have led inevitably to black despair and bitter sense of injustice.

We have learned to fight back at misfortune, to deny the autocracy of unhappiness and to work hopefully for freedom of the body and spirit of men. Yet we have not escaped the necessity for an eternal fact to justify the labors, hazards and riddles of life. These challenge and attack us from within as once cruelty and injustice beset us from without.

Knowledge alone does not satisfy our spirits; we still seek for meaning and design in the complex pattern of which we are a part. Without some firm faith and confidence in a purpose to life we are still in the shadow of tragedy—the tragedy of finding our labors and ideals a mockery and our life itself a jest.

No Spinsters

LIKE the Aztecs and Amazons the old maids are a vanished race. A literary searching party sent into the field for the latter by one of the women's magazines found only a few survivors and they were elderly and the same legends that have been handed down generation to generation.

There are still unmarried ladies of past marrying age, but they are no longer spoken of as spinsters, contemplated sadly, made the brunt of derisive wit, nor found to conceal their state as something disgraceful and unblessed.

Time was when the unmarried woman over 30 kept very quiet about her 'single blessedness.' Now she proclaims it aloud and aloft. Of old it was hurt pride that made old maids profess preference for their lonely existance. Today many women are sincere in protestations of that sort.

A number of things have wrought this social revolution. Emancipation of womanhood contributed. Industrial independence and virtual equality between the sexes in business helped remove the old-maid stigma. The changed economic order which placed millions of women in a better position to support a husband than millions of men are in to support a wife added fuel to the feminist fire.

Sentimentalists who would mourn the old and decry the new will concede at least, that abolition of the bondage of spinsterhood was a humanitarian stroke.

Nothing worries some people more than the fear of getting down and out and having to work for a living.

CHAPTER LIX

"Haste!" The face of this man posted on watch was suddenly aghast. That burly figure with Wynter and Grayson, touched by one of the headlights of the car by the roadside, was only too familiar to Frome. "My God! Tonight of all times! If Haste were to have as much as a glimpse behind that door!"

The realization of this unexpected danger close on them staggered Frome. He and his associates had reckoned with the chance possibilty of Wynter and Grayson discovering that workmen were busy at the underground door, that risk was unavoidable. Only at the worst these two could have no authority to demand that the door should be unlocked. But—Wynter had brought the police!

PANIC

There was panic in Frome's eyes. He knew what that meant. Very quickly, very stealthily, he began to move toward the house with his ominous news.

In the house Martell and Sant were waiting in a fever of impatience until the workmen should be through with their labors. Once the coast was clear they must hurry through the task of emptying the crypt of its dangerous contents—not only the cocaine, but something even more dangerous and damning still to them. Not until then would they feel safe.

The door was flung open abruptly and Frome broke in with his breathless warning:

"The police are here! I've just seen Wynter and Grayson at the gates with a Scotland Yard man—Haste!"

"Haste!" Sant's voice as he echoed the name trailed off into a gasp of panic.

"He's not here for nothing, that's certain—and there's a car outside in the road that pretends to have broken down. I thought nothing of it till I saw Haste. It means they've got the front guarded—and pretty certainly the side gates as well!"

Sant's big, round face was like gray chalk.

"Then it is spell's the end——" he broke out in a gasp.

Martell, still seemingly as cool as ever in face of this unexpected danger, interrupted him immediately.

"Throwing up the sponge already?" There was a sneer in the rasp of his voice. "Pull yourself together, man! They're waiting for that door to be opened, and as soon as they get it they'll rush in and drag us out—what evidence we've left behind us—it's our only chance! We've got to get down there and finish our job before they can get to us!"

Sant's big, round face was like gray chalk.

"Then it is spell's the end——" he broke out in a gasp.

Martell, still seemingly as cool as ever in face of this unexpected danger, interrupted him immediately.

"Throwing up the sponge already?" There was a sneer in the rasp of his voice. "Pull yourself together, man! They're waiting for that door to be opened, and as soon as they get it they'll rush in and drag us out—what evidence we've left behind us—it's our only chance! We've got to get down there and finish our job before they can get to us!"

Martell cut harshly across his partner-in-crime's protest.

DESPERATION

"Play as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb." There was an evil glint in his reckless criminal's eyes—wicked eyes they looked now in this moment of sudden danger. "The only way—you're with me, aren't you, Frome? The only way! And who's to say it was an explosive that caused the damage? A shaky old wall like that—nothing surprising about its collapsing suddenly like that inner wall!"

"But—but you can't do that, man," cried Sant, recoiling, "not when there are men working there! To send that wall crashing would mean almost certain death to them——"

"Would you rather see the hangman's rope round all our necks?" broke in Martell. "You sentimental fool, but for you Wynter, that night he came prying at Monksilver—damned bulldog Englishman that he is—wouldn't have left the place alive to tell tales about Crayke or to bring the police here to Beggar's Court tonight! It was you who insisted we should spare his life—and see what those scruples of yours have done for us! And, not content with that, you'd interfere again!"

The sudden, furious outburst had stripped away the usual suavity from Martell's voice.

"For the moment at least we're safe. Whatever the police may suspect, they can do nothing without more proof than they've got yet—that proof that, if you had your way, they'd find in the crypt within the next half hour to spell ruin for all of us!"

"There's only one way of keeping them on this side of that underground door," he went on, "long enough to give us breathing space in which to make our getaway, for it's come to that now——"

"No, no, I won't agree! Not when it means the death of those men!" cried Sant with a shudder. But his protest was wavering, less resolute.

He glanced round, to see that Frome had already left the room. And he knew, as Martell knew, why Frome had gone—on what desperate errand.

* * *

In the haste Frome had forgotten to tell his confederates about Martell's wife.

"Utter wrong 'un' Martin might have been, but the thought of this second cold-blooded crime, following so quickly upon the murder of Crayke, and both directed from the same source at Beggar's Court had touched Jim and Bill Grayson with a cold thrill of horror.

"When Martin rang me up this morning he was afraid Martell suspected his defection," Jim said as they waited in the dark shadow of the trees. "A devil incarnate Martell must be for whom hanging's too good—but thank God, tonight should see the beginning of the end for him and his villainies!" he broke out with a fierce intensity.

Inspector Haste nodded grimly.

"Yes, the rope's waiting for him, and he won't escape it this time. I've got the grounds watched, even the boathouse watched. There's not one chance in ten that Martell will slip out of that net."

"I wonder how far Mrs. Martin was in her husband's secrets?" said Jim suddenly.

He was wondering whether they could learn anything from her of Frank Severn and of that other missing man, Ilsham.

INTERRUPTION

Almost as Jim spoke from beyond the further side of the ruins a sound came with startling suddenness, a raised, incisive voice that carried penetratingly over the dark grounds.

"Not this time, Frome—you with your damned murderous tricks!"

A strangely familiar voice, if not to Haste, to his two companions that made Jim and Bill Grayson exchange a swift amazed glance.

"Ilsham!" broke from Jim half incredulously. That was Ilsham's voice!"

Further concealment was over the question now. Two shrill blasts on a police whistle cut through the night—Haste's signal to the men posted outside in the lane—as the three leaped out of cover to join in the direction of that queer[illegible]

THAT there is nothing that so appeals to the buying public as good advertising.

The greatest opportunity for expanding a business is through the printed page

It teaches the buyer to do business with the firm that advertises.

Many successful business concerns use a friendly style in their advertising — a sort of friendly, chatty way of telling the public about their business and what they have to offer

Business concerns that are well advertised are known as leaders in their line of business

They keep the public thinking and talking about their business

That is why their goods and service are always growing in popularity.

THERE IS NO BETTER INDICATION OF THE PUBLIC'S REGARD FOR ADVERTISED GOODS THAN THE REPUTATION THAT MANUFACTURERS OF QUALITY AND ADVERTISED GOODS HAVE

He is held under heavy bail.

JOBLESS AID HITS STUDENTS

CORVALLIS, Ore.—One statewide unemployment relief measure, Oregon State College students have found, means unemployment for them, according to Mrs. Lula Howard, employment secretary of the campus Y. M C. A. When faculty members of the college voted, with other state employes one day's pay a month to the unemployed for five months, the demand for student labor fell off greatly, Mrs. Howard said. As a result, many of the students may lack sufficient funds to return for a second term Three-fourths of the students at Oregon State are wholly or partly self-supporting.

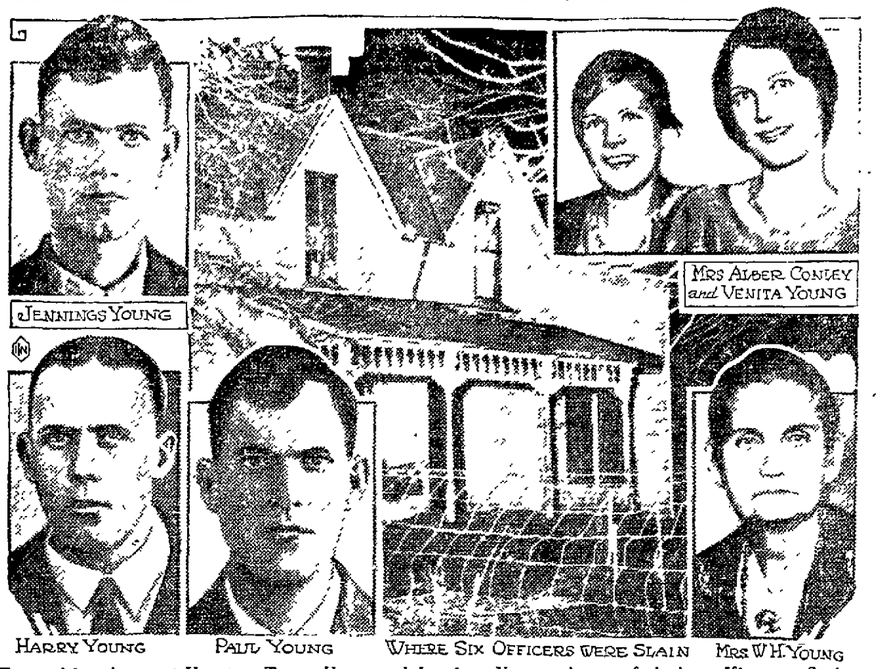
Sons' Suicide Realized Mother's Wish

* * * * * * * * *

Choice of Death Before Capture Probably Only Decision in Lives of Young Brothers, Slayers of Six Officers, Approved by Mother.



Trapped in a house at Houston, Texas, Harry and Jennings Young, slayers of six law officers at Springfield, Mo., put an end to their own lives before they would submit to capture. Thus they inadvertently committed the only act of their notorious career of which their mother approved. Mrs. W. H. Young, mother of the desperadoes, stated when questioned by police that she prayed her boys would commit suicide before they'd allow the law to exact the penalty for their crimes. Mrs. Young had eight children, four of whom were boys. Of the four, only one, Oscar, stuck to the straight and narrow path. The other three, Harry, Paul and Jennings, embarked at an early age upon a career of lawlessness and soon acquired prison records. The gun battle at the Young farm in Springfield, Mo., was the climax of their career. It resulted from an attempt by a posse to arrest Harry, wanted for a murder committed two years ago. The cold-blooded killing of six officers of the posse aroused the State and the Nation. More than 10,000 police, deputies, special officers and volunteers aided in hunting the killers. But women members of the Young family, Vineta and Mrs. Alber Conley, sisters of the killers, freely predicted that their brothers would never be taken alive. The mother said she hoped they wouldn't.
